Summer 2025

OUT SOON!

Hello!

And welcome to my fifth newsletter, which I hope finds you well and enjoying summer sunshine between the clouds. It's been a busy year here at Southfield House, not least with the research and writing of my latest book: "Southfield House: the lives beyond the door". I started out with the thought that this would be a straightforward project. I should have known better! From discovering more about the name of the house to the fascinating characters who lived and owned the property (including Ebenezer Cobb Morley), it has been a revelation. It has also been a joy to write, especially when looking back over the last thirty years I have lived here. Hopefully, the book will be ready well in time for the Christmas market, when you can read it for yourself. Watch this space and check my website for more information on the release date:

REVIEWS OF THE ANNE BRONTË BOOK

I am pleased to say that 'Lay the Flower where It's Fallen' has been well received since publication. Here is a selection of reviews.

Goodreads:

This book looks at the short life of Anne Brontë, whose literary works lived mostly in the shadow of those of her more successful sisters...Taylor's writing is both mature and informative, and the book is an absolute joy to read.

Amazon:

I have just finished the book and enjoyed it. This is a story that I partially knew but really needed proper telling.

The Brontë Society

A good introduction for new fans of Anne Brontë, and the personal nature with which Taylor approaches her subject succeeds in giving the reader a greater appreciation of the world Anne lived in, and her love of Scarborough

These are just a few, but read it for yourself and learn about this most fascinating of the Brontë sisters who deserves more recognition than she gets.

WEBSITE OVERHAUL

www.sftaylorauthor.com has been given an update. Here, you can find information about all of my books, which now number six in total, and you can order copies post-free.

I will be updating activity via a regular blog and invite you to sign up so you do not miss out on anything new.

Lastly, a date for your diary:

The Local History Book Fair is at Hull Minster. Saturday 20th September 2025, 10am to 3:30pm. Free entry. Come and say hello and take a closer look at the works I have published on famous names that have graced the locality of Yorkshire: Lawrence of Arabia, Wilfred Owen and Anne Brontë.

That's all for now, but thank you for reading and my very best to you all

Sue
